PRICES ADVANCING.

The general advance in prices is being felt in Gettysburg as well as elsewhere. Merchants are compelled to pay more for their goods than formerly and are of necessity compelled to sell higher.

A business man of our town tells us that in his line the advance in cost to him during the last three months has been from 20 to 30 per cent., and he anticipates that prices will go still higher. He fears also that business will be effected unfavorably by the conditions, owing to the fact that the people in general are not in the position to pay the advance. A second one states that in his line, dry-goods, the advance in some departments amounts to 30 per cent.

It is remarked occasionally that high prices are an evidence of industrial activity and that they operate to the common good. To the consumer, however, we have no doubt that it is detrimental; and to the producer, we believe, the present advance is but little, if any, benefit. The selling price must, of course, with the buying price, but the ordinary merchant is not disposed to raise it, as he would also be compelled to offer a discount and may occasionally suffer a loss to keep his price down. It may lose, therefore, temporarily instead of making a gain.

That prices will go still higher is to be expected and if wages and general incomes increase in proportion business will be improved, but so long as incomes remain low high prices are not a benefit, except to the various trusts engaged in manufacturing the various commodities.

TO-DAY'S ELECTION.

The Penn. North American, of yesterday, says:

What the outcome of the voting tomorrow will be it is impossible to make even a good guess. Nobody knows what the actual political situation is. Chairman Reeder, of the machine's State Committee, is as ignorant of it as any man on the street. He is not even informed of it. He has been engaged in politics and has made no efforts to ascertain the inclinations of the voters. It has been a stupid drift from beginning to end. Such a campaign in a state with a normal Republican majority of 150,000 and a population equal to that of Pennsylvania would beat the party in.

Chairman Billing, of the Democratic State Committee, is not much better informed than Reeder, for different reasons. When Billing took the chairmanship he found a divided and disorganized party. He has had no office-holders to assess, no drilled regiments or workers to call upon. It has been impossible for him to make a canvass of the voters with any closeness. But he has accomplished one thing of fundamental importance, that being his constant efforts in getting his organization no longer a hang-up on the Tammany machine, and is honest in its desire to overthrow it. This gives us strength to the Democratic party at to-morrow's election, and will put life into it hereafter. It is years since Pennsylvania had a Democratic party. Now we shall learn just what it is and what possible of healthful opposition are. Billing and Creasy have given it a good start on the road to respectability.

Could a fair vote and an honest count be had, the State, we believe, would give Creasy a majority over Berney.

But a fair vote and an honest count will not be had while the machine is dominant. Nowhere will all the efforts of the Tammany be of thousands of fraudulent votes will be cast in Philadelphia. The city Administration and the machine leaders have combined to make the vote here large enough to overcome the vote of the State in case of need. Men destined of gain the favor of the city Administration will take the same desperate chance as before. There will be a corruption fund of the enormous size to pay repeaters. While the legitimate sources of political revenue may be much diminished, a new source is open. "The Front," of course, will not let the other forms of money-making law-breaking escape. The vice of Philadelphia will be taxed to beat its dead on the road to respectability.

For the Farmer Fares I.

Volumes have been written concerning the property of the manufacturers, and traders, during this year.

It is now known that Mr. Little has been sold of his. Undoubtedly he has shared the general pronouncement to the extent of having better markets for many products. He has been favored by nature with an enormous crop of corn—an abundance of apples, pears, plums and cherries; a moderate yield in wheat, a fair return in oats and hay. The season was favorable for nearly all vegetables, with prices slightly higher than last year.

On the other side of the ledger the man with the hoe finds a higher cost of his necessities, machinery, fencing, clothing, leather and lumber. He has been obliged to pay higher wages for farm labor, has borne his share of the public taxes and has met other expenses in proportion. His higher cost has balanced his better market. He was prosperous last year and he has lost nothing this year except his accustomed rest, the loss of that being due to extra effort on account of the scarcity of farm hands. The farmer will close his books for 1859 not much richer.

Yet the farmer is happy. The man with the reaper and binder is usually a philosopher, whatever may be said of his progenitor, the man with the hoe. He has food in his cellar, grain in his bins, hay in his barns, fodder in his piles. He can live well through the winter without thought of the inflow of money. Yet the money market. The farmer can spend the winter evenings reading his favorite books, and planning for next season's crops. With the cheer of a roaring fire and a jug of cider he is beyond the cares that meet merchant or manufacturer constantly under the strain of securing material and catering to the wants of buyers.

Yes, there is hard work in tilling the soil, but there is no soul searching anxiety in the life of the man who lives close to nature and respects her moods. The farmer, this year, is in the prosperous procession.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

NATURE OF THE MULE.

But while the English soldier is vindicated from the suspicion of ignominious defeat, (at Ladysmith) there is no language too severe to apply to the treacherous mules which deserted to the enemy with the ammunition and guns confided to their care. General Waller is clearly in error in describing their conduct as a "stampede." It was nothing more nor less than premeditated treachery. Nothing can stampede a mule, unless he wants to be stampeded. All the efforts of the mule to save his master's horses to hold his ground. His repons bullet and shells with equal indifference, and is no more affected by the buzzing of a mosquito than the Spanish mule which defied the bombardment of the American fleet at Matanzas and calmly died in his tracks in defense of his native country.

The campaign about to close has been, as a rule, one of quiet suspense, with little of the bustle and torchlight procession canvas. William T. Creasy, the Demo- cratic candidate for State Treasurer, the principal officer to be voted for, had no assistance from outside the State. Lt. Col. James E. Barnett, his opponent, who was nominated immediately upon his return from the Philippines, has called some exploiting of a portion of the Thirtieth Regiment to help his cause along.

At a special meeting of the Carlisle town council Saturday evening a resolution was adopted requesting Chief Burgess W. E. Fought to resign. Fought is dead.

Chairman Vandiver, of the Democratic State Committee, says that both the city of Baltimore and the State will go Democratic by good majorities—from 6,000 to 8,000 of the total vote.

In Pennsylvania.

Chairman Vandiver, of the Democratic State Committee, says that both the city of Baltimore and the State will go Democratic by good majorities—from 6,000 to 8,000 of the total vote.

Old campaigners predict a heavy falling off in the vote polled in Pennsylvania to-day.
